Website refreshed in 2022

This website, initially launched in 2009 and regularly updated from then on, is a small digital archive representing selected works from a personal art practice. Text and images are brought together as PDF files. In early 2022 the site's content was completely refreshed.

The multi-page PDF compilations, mostly having a landscape page orientation, can be viewed in common browsers as well as by using Adobe Reader after downloading.

The former order of presentation, which was chronological, has been replaced by a more intuitive pairing of works which aims for improved and clearer overall comprehension.

A number of the photographs selected earlier have been technically reworked. The typeface has also been throughout.

The artist's so-called A4-antenna project, which occupies a central but not exclusive place in his practice, has maintained a dominant presence in the list of works.

A4-antenna painting project, short description

A4-antenna is a long-term painting project that has been in progress since 2003.

The title A4-antenna comes from the only work of the project that was given a name. All others are instead titled by number in chronological order. Any given selection of those works for display purposes however, does not necessarily follow that sequence.

The individual paintings all measure 40 x 40 cm and are, as a rule, placed side by side so as to form a straight horizontal row.

The consistent use of equal sized canvases could be thought of as if one single painting is worked over multiple times.
